

AFFORDABLE CARE ACT AND BREASTPUMPS

Did you know that your insurance will cover a breastpump!

Just ask your doctor for a prescription.

You may be able to get help with breastfeeding at no cost

Health insurance plans must provide breastfeeding support, counseling, and equipment for the duration of breastfeeding. These services may be provided before and after you have your baby. These rules apply to Health Insurance Marketplace plans and all other health insurance plans, except for grandfathered plans.

Coverage of breast pumps

Your health insurance plan must cover the cost of a breast pump – and may offer to cover either a rental or a new one for you to keep. Your plan may have guidelines on whether the covered pump is manual or electric, how long the coverage of a rented pump lasts, and when they'll provide the pump (before or after birth). But it's up to you and your doctor to decide what's right for you. Make sure to ask your doctor to write you a prescription for a breastpump. Contact your insurance plan for questions about your breastfeeding benefits.

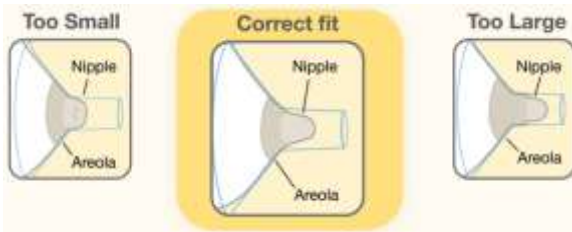

Your doctor's breastfeeding recommendations

In many cases, your insurance plan will follow your doctor's recommendations on what is medically appropriate. Some insurance plans may require pre-authorization from your doctor to ensure the proper services are provided. Talk to your doctor to find out what this means for you. Ask to have a double electric especially if you are returning to work.

FLANGE SIZING

Some insurance pumps only come with one size flange. There are other sizes available.

- Nipple should move freely in the tunnel
- None or very little tissue of the areola (darker skin) is being pulled into the tunnel of the flange
- Nipple is not rubbing against the sides of the flange
- You feel the breast emptying all over
- You are free of pain with pumping.
